Through Dialogues on the Experience of War, the National Endowment for the Humanities (NEH) brings together veterans and civilians to reflect upon powerful literature and art.

The NEH has funded 62 Dialogues programs in 26 states and the District of Columbia. Many of these involve multiple sites, further extending the program’s impact and reaching underserved communities.

Dialogues programs help veterans gain new insight into their military experience by engaging rich humanities resources.

- Veterans bond through collective reflection around novels, memoirs, poetry, art, music, and films that illuminate common patterns of deployment and homecoming across centuries, continents, and cultures.
- In a survey across five programs, 96 percent of participants indicated that the humanities materials helped them better understand their experiences.
Dialogues programs help veterans combat isolation and form networks of support.
- Respondents to the 2017 Wounded Warrior Project survey reported significantly higher levels of social isolation than the general population.
- In a survey of five programs, 100 percent of respondents reported a desire to “keep in touch with some of the people [they] met through the program.”

Dialogues programs meaningfully bridge the divide between veterans and their communities.
- Plays, lectures, and panels foster deeper understanding of veterans’ experiences.
- At public programs held by Ohio University, 85 percent of respondents agreed that the “program gave [them] opportunities to see connections between those who have served and those who have not.” Ninety-seven percent felt “more confident about taking part in thoughtful discussions about war.”

Dialogues programs reach underserved veterans.
- Programs hosted by the Clemente Course have reached female veterans and veterans experiencing homelessness.
- Auburn University’s program reached rural communities and imprisoned veterans.

As someone who has never been involved in the armed forces, I think it was important to see this play/hear these stories to ‘understand’ these struggles better.”
- VETERAN PARTICIPANT

“...The support I received from staff and classmates when I was having a hard time allowed me to know it was OK and not keep on shutting down and shutting out.”
- VETERAN PARTICIPANT

79% of survey respondents agreed that their Dialogues program made them “more likely to ask for help if [they] need it.”
